ENDORSEMENT: Denver Police Protective Association Endorses Kelly Brough for Mayor

Denver, CO – Today, the Denver Police Protective Association (PPA) endorsed Kelly Brough for mayor, calling her a “trusted leader” who will work to make Denver safer for all of its residents. PPA joins a long list of public safety endorsers including former executive director of Denver's Department of Public Safety Stephanie O'Malley, former Denver safety managers Al Lacabe and Fidel “Butch” Montoya, former Denver chiefs of police Aristedes "Ari" Zavaras and Gerry Whitman, and former Denver fire chiefs Nick Nuanes and Larry Trujillo. “Kelly is the only candidate in this race with the executive experience and knowledge of how to run this city,” said Tyson Worrell, PPA President. “While serving as John Hickenlooper’s Chief of Staff, we witnessed firsthand Kelly’s ability to face tough challenges and to bring people to the table to solve those challenges. We believe that she has realistic solutions and can work collaboratively to build a culture where law enforcement has the training, the equipment and the community support necessary to meet the many challenges our city faces. Kelly is the trusted leader we need to make Denver safer for all of its residents.”

“It’s going to take courage and innovation to make Denver a safer city for all of its residents,” said Kelly Brough. “I’m honored by the PPA’s endorsement and I look forward to working closely with them, and other community safety advocates that have joined our team, to recruit diverse officers, build police culture around transparency and accountability, and focus on crime prevention strategies to improve the safety in our city.”

Kelly Brough is not a politician and has never run for office, but she has the lived experience to understand the challenges facing Denver families and the executive experience to take action and make real, positive change. Her proven track record and experience as the Chief of Staff to former Mayor John Hickenlooper and first woman CEO of the Denver Chamber of Commerce has positioned her to successfully tackle Denver’s biggest challenges like housing costs, homelessness, and public safety.
